

Re: Permission to conduct research with FindParticipants

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is regarding a request to conduct academic research using FindParticipants.com. Please accept this letter as evidence of permission to conduct research using our service. Researchers and students are permitted to conduct research using FindParticipants provided that they comply with our Terms of Use, available on our website.

As a research recruitment tool, FindParticipants.com was developed to connect researchers and participants easily and quickly. Our site allows researchers to have a direct connection with participants by sending participation requests via email. Recruitment e-mails are sent to potential participants, which include the researcher's conditions of participation. FindParticipants does not survey the participants; we simply provide the forum for researchers to connect with participants who have already volunteered to be contacted for research. We provide a direct connection between academic researchers, and thousands of research participants through an incredibly simple web-based interface.

FindParticipants does not release any identifying information about participants, or information that would allow participants to be identified to any other user including researchers, nor does FindParticipants sell or otherwise release information about any registered user at any time. All research participant registrations are self-initiated and require explicit confirmation of account creation by the user via email. At no time for any reason does FindParticipants purchase, or utilize email marketing lists or other means of participant acquisition, which would negate a participant's choice to be a participant with our service.

If you have any questions, please contact us via our website at <https://www.findparticipants.com/contact>.

Sincerely,

FindParticipants.com
